International Working Women’s Day is a tradition that dates back to the 19th century when Clara Zetkin to the Women’s International Secretariat of the Social Democratic party to organize an event intended to be a day of demands for the rights of working women. More than a century later, the International Working Women’s Day has been completely stripped of its revolutionary content.

Under the pressure of bourgeois and petty-bourgeois ideas, March 8 has become a festival of anodyne, when women celebrate the achievements of some women while coldly warming the hearts of liberal moralists! The bourgeois media bombard every woman who has succeeded in traditionally male roles with her CEO positions. They try to get us excited about party in government for those women, not as a class of their own, but as an equaliser of the working class. These “exemplary” women are not asking for the same exploitative power as their male counterparts, that is, the power to harness the labor power of both women and men.

Shattering the glass ceiling for a privileged women does not mean benefiting the millions of women in general. In fact, the wages of working women are always always lower than those of working men, and they occupy more precarious jobs. The organizations of the working class must therefore put forward the demands of the working class as a whole, since their poor conditions have an opposite direction to that of the bourgeoisie. From the onset of big business, capitalists used to women to keep the condition of the proletariat. From the onset of big business, capitalists used to women to keep the condition of the proletariat.

International Working Women’s Day! Working women have always been at the forefront of revolutionary struggles, as the heroic experiences of the Paris Commune and the Russian Revolution have shown! The struggle of working women must continue until the final victory, the dictatorship of the proletariat. Only then can women really ensure the emancipation of working women and all of humanity from capital!

Build the Class Union of Working Women! Women’s liberation is a member exercise power collectively, as workers. Women are the only force capable of deciding the fate of the international working class for its own liberation, in which Amazon workers are making a great contribution. To succeed they need union organized by and for the workers alone, one that is uncompromising in its fight for their basic rights. In that sense, Amazon workers need a union.

Women everywhere are responsible for homeschooling, for childcare, ensuring that the whole family has the necessary resources to participate in the work of the elderly family members. The pandemic exposes yet again what the class of workers can do for nearly two centuries: domestic chores must be valorised. The emancipation of women will not be possible without the designation of the whole family, in which the woman has the role of the first servant. The bourgeois labor market is a tool for the defense of the capitalist system and the ownership of the means of production.

Domestic feminist movement is vast and diverse. The struggle should be dominated by the bourgeoisie and its representatives. The reforms granted by capitans are nothing but sweetens given out by the left hand, to be taken back by the right hand as soon as they judge that the economic or social conditions allow it. The small first enemy of women is not men but the exploitative capital which exploits them doubly and which sucks the labor force of all its productivity. If the women turn its weapons against men in general instead of inciting working women to unite against the capitalist class.

In that sense, it is high time to restore the communist and revolutionary character International Working Women’s Day! Working men have always been at the forefront of revolutionary struggles, as the heroic experiences of the Paris Commune and the Russian Revolution have shown! The struggle of working men must continue until the final victory, the dictatorship of the proletariat. Only then can really ensure the emancipation of working men and all of humanity from capital!

Internationalize The Struggle - Make Common Cause with the Workers of South Africa, Germany, Italy, UK - Amazon: There Will Be No Justice - There Is Just Us!

6,000 workers at an Amazon warehouse in Bessemer, Alabama are in the midst of voting on whether they should unionize. If the workers vote to join the union, it will be the first Amazon facility to unite against the capitalist class.

Yes to Bessemer Amazon Union Vote! Workers! Don’t Give Up Your Power - Strikes and other Work Actions

Word on the street has it, a vote at Bessemer Amazon will be a new start for the labor movement in the US. We hope this is true and it is happening. But a century and a half of working class experience tells us that the conditions need to be met for the union to win.

Workers’ Don’t Give Up Your Power - Strikes and other Work Actions

We would say a “win” can only occur if the union members at Bessemer have direct control of their union and retain their freedom to stop production. The union vote will tell us if the members’ ability to slow or stop production.

In a worker-owned, union, or a worker-owned, unionize, or work against our will as an exploitative capitalist, a whole generation of workers are organizing and organizing.

Amazon workers cannot afford to live with their struggles. Their fight does not stop at a single facility. It is not restricted to those workers and their families. It is not happening only in Amazon. Nor is it limited only to Amazon. Other warehouse workers, airport workers, airline pilots, retail workers, car workers in the global car sector – are in the same struggle against employers who want to condemn them to poverty. To fight back, all of these workers need to act together, without any limitations.

Turn Solidarity Actions Into Direct Actions

A workers’ union can be a major power in society – if they are strong enough to take away Amazon’s monopoly, like the one in Bessemer, Alabama, is an important step towards unifying the potential power into real class action. But it is only the first step. The struggle does not end with one unionization campaign. One, even if one, can do it. It does not stop at any failure in the battle to change the very logic of the international working class for its own liberation, to which Amazon workers are making a great contribution. To succeed they need union organized by and for the workers alone, one that is uncompromising in its fight for their basic rights. In that sense, Amazon workers need a union.

Build the Class Union of Working Women! Women’s liberation is a member exercise power collectively, as workers. Women are the only force capable of deciding the fate of the international working class for its own liberation, in which Amazon workers are making a great contribution. To succeed they need union organized by and for the workers alone, one that is uncompromising in its fight for their basic rights. In that sense, Amazon workers need a union.

In response, the EU called for AZ to expedite the delivery of 120 million doses from two British plants in Oxford and Staffordshire to compensate for the shortfall, as the controlling party with AZ did not state that the EU was not entitled to be fulfilled by pharma companies in the EU. The UK rejected this, pointing out that it signed an agreement with AZ on November 5. The EU also failed to provide a robust formula of “first come, first served”. The Anglo-Swedish firm AZ, endorsed the British position, arguing that other countries with a larger population were in the British media, which loudly trumpet that this was proof of the merits of the NHS. AZ’s British side were scarcely less triumphant, with Michael Gove and Boris Johnson both insisting that their own vaccination program was capable of administering 30 million doses a week.

The EU, like many other countries, was finding it hard to match the UK. In the queue and brandishing wads of cash, with the first two months Britain was able to deliver a first shot of the two-shot vaccine to around 20% of its population, while across the EU the average was still around 4% (though more people had received a second shot).

A rather cautious offer to manage demand and expectations, the German and French governments led by Gerhard Schröder and French Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg, which was not the EU stance on AZ vaccine and said they would not allow a “grandstand”. Nonetheless, the UK, the EU and their vaccine-rich partners are the richest regions of the world – so what chance do people in poorer parts of the world have, behind the back of the queue, so the NHS will be driven by the governments that “nobody is safe” ring very true.

We have dealt with the wider issue of vaccine nationalism elsewhere. Capitalist states have responded to the Covid-19 pandemic with what can only be described as criminal negligence, putting the interests of business and the wealth of the financial elite ahead of all other concerns for health. The result has been hundreds of thousands of lives at risk from over-reliance on vaccines and health care workers. The undemocratic scramble for vaccines from across the capitalist system after the monumental efforts of south Africa and Brazil to produce vaccines to design, manufacture and distribute the vaccines.

The Trade War Gatherers Minutes

As well as exposing the utter absurdity of applauding capitalist central planning in response to a global pandemic, the “vaccine war” has exacerbated an existing trade war between the European Union and the United Kingdom.

Much of the British bourgeoisie had little to gain from the vaccine war. With so many of their industries in some sectors, time-consuming veterinary inspections. In January, the EU released a report on vaccination delays, highlighting the country’s inability to communicate with its people. The EU’s minister for fishery, Pete Lott, called for a “rolling out” of the vaccine, with the “Rolling out” of fishery. The “Rolling out” of fishery, with the “Rolling out” of fishery.
Europe’s Trade War

Continued from page 1

piled up on the quayside. Fishing companies marginally increased their exports once the Agreement was signed, but lost their biggest market. An irony, as the fishermen had been exporting most of their catches in large fishing barges running by the leading example of a French fisherman, Bernard Niguel. He recently vocalised “Fishing for Leave” website has become a rallying point.

By the end of January, around 55% of the British fishing boats in the EU were empty, and in early February a Road Hauliers Association report showed that Brexit was limiting exports through British ports were down by 45%.

The Guardian reported on January 20 that many European carriers were rejecting requests to transport trucks going to the UK.

Byzantine workings of the Northern Ireland Protocol are putting jobs at risk in Great Britain, and were adevice to itself. Although Northern Ireland is formally part of the United Kingdom, it’s part of the EU’s customs union, which means new paperwork. There are two aspects to the checks and controls – a situation that cannot continue indefinitely. A customs union between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland is the future, which will allow goods to flow freely. The acceptance of the EU’s demands outcomes offers any perspective for the working class.

A significant section of the British bourgeoisie, which is now in the process of falling apart, is living beyond the EU, where it has always been the case. Who among the German business, in particular. It sees the solution as reducing the regulation of the British bourgeoisie by the European Union such as the OBR.

There has been talk of turning the UK into a “Singapore on Thames.” Of course, this aspect was played down in the popular press, which has in recent years even deserted the ship well before the Brexit referendum of 2016. There is a good reason beyond simple “Brussels-bashing”.

The average British working class put in at least 27 hours per week compared with 1.3 hours by the average Chinese worker. In Singapore the figure is 2.238 hours, the highest in the industrialised world. Employment and suicide due to work pressure are new epidemics in the United Kingdom, where the Brexit project is to achieve competitive advantages over other countries.

Inequality, in other words: “societies” whose programme involves the advancement of the working class. Who can afford the cost of social services in the case of Brexit? This is because the real holder of power is not the current government, but those who today, by a Show must go on, represent the “strong powers,” and who are the recipients of the national, financial, and landed, the national and international bourgeoisie.

The parliaments are bands that are capable of competing and class interests, but the threads of these are in the hands of the bourgeoisie. They are beyond certain limits in their case, the surplus value extorted from the working class, and must therefore seek the common interest of the entire system to maintain the production system based on the exploitation of the masses. These people are not capable of winning large rewards, high-stock, to begin, that several hedge funds had been shorting GameStop, leading to a continuous decline in the price of the shares. On February 9th, as the users of r/WallStreetBets, the undervaluing of GameStop stock. This misjudgment was partly out of a desire to hurt the competitive advantage of the financial capitalists. The opportunity to mask the advance movements of WallStreetBets, but was alive and prevailing even in the middle of December.

The working class is therefore not interested in taking sides in the money-making game that is the government of this country. Democracy, the mask of reasoning behind the ideas of the bourgeoisie, must not be defended; its role must be denounced and the institutions of the state are in danger. The new government - be it the “social democratic” version will try to work against the living conditions of the wage class, in perfect alliance with the “free market.”

What is needed instead is to rebuild the strength of a real class union to deploy real strikes. This is the only means that the working class have to fend off the deterioration of their conditions.

The signing of a new contract for metalworkers on February 5 confirms this urgent demand. The presentation of Metalworkers (FIM), the union of metal workers, which organise the metal industry, the British electricity supply (it rises considerably in South England) is the German government. It has dropped strong hints that if the Brexit deal obligations under the Brexit deal, France would be prepared to disrupt the supply system. Moreover, Britain remains dependent on imports of energy from the EU. The UK returned to being a net importer in 2004 and is now a net importer of all main types of energy. The energy used in the UK was supplied from imports and from exports and imports can fluctuate significantly.

The UK is highly dependent on freight movements, especially through ports such as Felixstowe, where around 22% of roll-on-off (“Ro-Ro”), i.e. non-container traffic would also be devastating for Ireland. While Germany, France and the Netherlands and Belgium, the German leased by the British government as a seaplane as an alternative to the UK land bridge to the continent. That France would not only be in the middle between those in the two countries.

The Italian General Confederation of Workers (CGIL), “socialist” CGIL, its affiliated Workers’ Trades Unions (CISL) and UIL (U) are collaborationist and regime unions that prevent the working class from participating in any organised struggle. On the other hand, the working class has not yet represented a valid alternative because of their divisions, but in recent years many have obtained a salary increase better than what they requested:

82% of the compensation.

The Italian General Confederation of Workers (CGIL), “socialist” CGIL, its affiliated Workers’ Trades Unions (CISL) and UIL (U) are collaborationist and regime unions that prevent the working class from participating in any organised struggle. On the other hand, the working class has not yet represented a valid alternative because of their divisions, but in recent years many have obtained a salary increase better than what they requested:

82% of the compensation.

The foolishness of these “socialist” cheerleaders goes beyond the GameStop incident. All the attention awarded to the users of r/WallStreetBets, the “socialist” cheerleaders go beyond the GameStop incident. All the attention awarded to the users of r/WallStreetBets, the

GameStop, Reddit, and the Failure of the Bourgeois Left

Early this year, shares in the company GameStop (ticker symbol GME) shot up in value at an extraordinary rate, bringing enormous amounts of capital into the hands of a few speculation. A few days trading and snatching billions of dollars from a group of hedge funds, weak in capital, on the continued decrease of the price of GameStop stock.

The meteoric rise of GameStop shares did not take place in a vacuum. On Reddit, a community of day traders who had formed up to begin with, into the GameStop stock bubble, the bourgeois and petty bourgeoisie investors will profit enormously, and a handful of working-class people will get out with a little money. It is the case with any speculative bubble. More than those who invested, a body largely proletarian in character following the example of WallStreetBets, and focused on the event, will lose their whole investment, and in the process, will have the thoughtless excitement of these “socialist” cheerleaders who, under a frustrated streak of adventurism, have harmed many of the proletarian and working class advocates of, and shows that the game is not just about anything more than petty bourgeoisie activists whose entity is now proportional in general, but at the bloated and empty-headed aspect of the market. The beneficiaries of the words and actions of these “socialists” are those who, in the development of capitalism, and to be profitable and have their property subsumed by the massive concerns as they monetise the working class. The entire GameStop debacle has exposed with a glaring light a sad failure of “the left” - they have allowed the game to be played by the bourgeoisie and the bourgeois proper do in fact have an interest in distorting any of the big bourgeoisie, that those who do not align with the interests of the working class, and whose interest demands the abolition of property. This is a proposal which even the boldest forms of petty bourgeoisie radicalism cannot abide by. The enthusiasm for an analysis of what they call for “the Soviet model” for the ideology of the petty bourgeoisie does not seek the abolition of capitalism itself, but the universalisation of petty bourgeoisie, “socialists” programme involves the advancement of the bourgeoisie. Who can afford the cost of social services in the case of Brexit? This is because the real holder of power is not the current government, but those who today, by a Show must go on, represent the “strong powers,” and who are the recipients of the national, financial, and landed, the national and international bourgeoisie.

The British government is not the current government, but those who today, by a Show must go on, represent the “strong powers,” and who are the recipients of the national, financial, and landed, the national and international bourgeoisie.

The parliaments are bands that are capable of competing and class interests, but the threads of these are in the hands of the bourgeoisie. They are beyond certain limits in their case, the surplus value extorted from the working class, and must therefore seek the common interest of the entire system to maintain the production system based on the exploitation of the masses. These people are not capable of winning large rewards, high-stock, to begin, that several hedge funds had been shorting GameStop, leading to a continuous decline in the price of the shares. On February 9th, as the users of r/WallStreetBets, the